The primary concern of everyone this month was whether we were going to Germany for occupation, or return to the States. Although slated for a part in the Occupational Air Force in Europe, the possibility of going back to the States was never entirely removed from thought since plans concerning redeployment seemed to change a bit from time to time. Each day everyone tried to keep himself posted on latest developments in the points situation and the disposition of those in various categories.

Squadron Supply was kept busy during the month preparing equipment for shipment, and building, marking, and painting boxes to be used when the time comes for movement. At the same time a show-down inspection was held to determine the condition of individual clothing and equipment.

A Nissen Hut in the squadron area was repainted inside and converted into a Day Room. Furnished with writing tables, chairs, books and radio, it provides a comfortable place for relaxation during the evenings as well as being a convenient building for squadron meetings and pay call.

Around the first of the month, approximately one hundred ten (110) enlisted men were transferred to Fighter Units scheduled for return to the States and in turn, about the same number of men with lower ASR Scores, were assigned to the 349th squadron from Fighter Units.

Officers gained during the month and their duty assignments were:

|------------------------|--------------------------|
| Captain HUBERT McGOWAN | - Executive Officer |
| Captain DENZIL NAAR | - Operations Officer |
| Lt ALFRED CARTER | - Intelligence Officer |
| Lt JOSEPH NEVILLE | - Intelligence Officer |
| Lt ANTHONY CAPORIZZO | - Communications Officer |

Towards the latter part of the month a squadron "Pub" and Snack Bar was opened up in the area. Financially self-supporting, and operated by various enlisted men on the squadron council, the Snack Bar provides beer and a small variety of sandwiches from about 1900 hours to 2200 hours in the evenings. This Snack Bar which is run by the squadron council, has been a favorite among the enlisted personnel, especially since it is located in the Site, and is an individual accomplishment.

Various flights were made by 349th aircraft to Paris, Brussels, Marseilles and Munich. Personnel were flown to and from the Continent, and on other missions, equipment for Fighter Groups was ferried to their new bases on the continent.

Air Crews were able to meet all training requirements for the month despite some bad weather the first part of August. The squadron took part in a high altitude practice mission (Formation) on 22 August and Camera Gunnery Missions were flown throughout the month.

AUGUST 1945 SQUADRON HISTORY

"The old order changeth yielding place to new --" Tennyson's oft reiterated commentary in "Idylls of the King" well might form the synopsis of the history of the 350th Bombardment Squadron for August 1945.

The trickle of transfers which had begun in late July became a torrent which on August ninth swept two-fifths of the enlisted personnel of the Squadron off to join outfits destined for an early return to the Zone of the Interior. These were the men with eighty-five or more points, whom the War Department had decided might go home for discharge. And, of course, this meant that practically all the original personnel of the Squadron (with credit for twenty-six months overseas and six battle stars) were leaving.

The same trucks which bore these men away at noon amid clamorous good-byes returned a few hours later with an equal burden of men from Fighter Groups whose points destined them for occupational service in Germany. Many of these had thought they would go home with their old outfits, so their transfer was something of a shock; however, they have measured up admirably to this severe test of adaptability. Every department of the Squadron was affected by this double-edged transfer and it was a trying period for those who assumed new positions in the general reshuffling. The situation was more complicated by the fact that early in the month Headquarters decide to release high-point officers and their replacement took place at nearly the same time as that of the enlisted men.

Captain Robert H Tienken, the energetic Executive Officer, Captain Albert Paul, Adjutant and Supply Officer and Base PX Officer, Captain Timothy R. McMahon, Armament Officer, Captain Malcolm W Clouter, Communications Officer, 1st Lt Richard Nordrum, Engineering Officer, 1st Lt Ernest J. Irwin, Ordnance Officer, and 1st Lt Julius E. Waller, recently returned from the Continent, departed and their places were taken by Captain Franklin S. Seibert, who had previously served the Squadron in several different capacities including that of Adjutant and consequently bridges the hiatus between old and new in Squadron 350; Captain James H. McNamara, 1st Lt Edward J Carroll, 1st Lt George E. Mayberry, and 2d Lt John H. Reuther.

As a background to this hurry and bustle within the Squadron came the newspaper accounts of far greater happenings on the other side of the globe. For there our forces dropped the epochal atomic bombs! Russia declared war on Japan! And suddenly came word of Japan's surrender!

At first it seemed unbelievable, unreal, phantasmagoric; finally the true significance of the news enveloped us. The Great War, which had altered all our lives and wrecked a dozen nations, had come to an end. Hope could once again become reality.

The fate of the Squadron, however, remained unchanged -- all thoughts turned to Stuttgart and to the problems of an Occupational Air Force. A few members of the Squadron visited the Field assigned to the 100th Bombardment Group and returned to paint glowing word-pictures of the accommodations there -- a sort of Teutonic LaGuardia Air Terminus.

Then - almost without warning it came --- It was one of the last evenings of the month, August 27th to be exact, that Colonel Wallace laid down the phone in his office, picked up his hat and drove to the Base Theater. He asked that the lights be turned on and mounted the stage. Everyone sensed that something climactic was imminent, but were too startled to speculate. The Colonel raised his hand for silence and spoke, "Gentlemen, the One Hundredth Bomb Group is going to the United States!" Five minutes later the roof settled back on the theater, figuratively speaking, and he added the few details he knew at the time. Leaving the theater he made the rounds of the Clubs and repeated his momentous announcement. The ensuing jubilation equaled, if it did not excel, that of V-J day.

So fancy turned from thoughts of lonely furloughs in Switzerland or the French Riviera to joyous plans for going home. Thus, "the old order changeth yielding place to new" for the 350th Bombardment Squadron in this eventful month of August, Anno Domini, 1945.

351ST BOMBARDMENT SQUADRON.
100th Bombardment Group (H)
APO 557

August 1945 began with Air Force Day, and the base threw open its doors to a stream of civilians who straggled in, walked in, and rode in to have a look into the mysteries of a bomber base. Squadron mechanics and armorers stood by their assigned planes, and together with the pilots of said planes, pointed out the intricacies and fine points of a B-17. The children swarmed around the ships like a flock of gremlins, and many an embryonic pilot was born that day. The biggest thrill came to a chosen few who were permitted to ascend a few thousand feet and look down upon the checkered land which they had always been so close to...

On August 6, 1945, an explosion occurred on the island of Japan that was heard round the world. The atom bomb and atomic energy became the subject for technical and lay articles in the journals of the universe, and everyone soon knew what made the world tick, tock or disintegrate.... Then Russia came out with their declaration of war and it became evident that only the formality of surrender remained. London unofficially went wild, and men returning from passes on August 10, 11 and 12 told of the impromptu demonstrations all through the Hub of Empire... A few days later, the news was announced officially, although Russian troops were still chasing the Nips through Manchuria... Celebration was the order of the day, although the news was so staggering that the mere act of imbibing alcohol seemed to lose all meaning. Of course, the men were also staggering, but by August 15, everyone looked calmly at a world devoid of war. It seemed impossible.

At the beginning of the month, the 85-pointers moved out, and many were the farewells as the laden trucks left the squadron area and turned in a whirl of dust down the road. An elderly couple stood at the corner and waved their goodbyes at the Yanks with whom they had lived closely through such trying times. Capt. Robert H. Williams, the genial , youthful Squadron Adjutant, was among those leaving, accompanied by 134 enlisted men, many of whom had been with the squadron and group ever since its activation.

On August 9, Lt David C. Bossman was appointed Adjutant, and the following day, Captain Grafton Jones was appointed Executive Officer, together with an entirely new Orderly Room crew. Many men from fighter outfits shipped into the squadron as replacements, and familiar faces became rare indeed. Another primary appointment of paramount importance was the emergence of PFC Smogar as Mail Orderly in place of the departed Opl. Joe Mamot. The morale of the men who managed to receive their mail remained high, while the others muttered that all their mail must have been on ships that went down or trains that were derailed.

On August 8, the Group was relieved from the Third Division and assigned to the First Division, the entire process being consummated quite smoothly through words on paper.

The 27th of August brought news of a heartening nature. In a whirlwind tour of all clubs, bars and theatre, Lt.Col. Wallace announced that the occupation of Germany had been scrubbed, as far as the 100th Bomb Group was concerned. The cheers of the men echoed and re-echoed throughout the base. The Colonel also stated that it was planned to get every man off the base before the chill of another English winter set in. It was hinted that the aerial route back might possibly be taken.

Flying schedules remained heavy, with planes of the squadron taking off continuously, the accent being placed on celestial navigation. Another indication of things that may come.

And so the eventful month of August closed, a month so laden with importance to humanity, that it must take years before its true significance can be seen in the light of historical perspective. [REDACTED]
